topic: single page application SPA's

summary:

SPA is a type of website that operates within a single page, where content is loaded and updated dynamically without having to reload the entire site each time the user navigates. Instead of opening many different pages, the SPA displays all the information in a single interface, and when the user clicks or moves around the site example:

In Gmail, you can open emails, reply, switch between folders (inbox, sent, spam), and everything happens without reloading the page, because the content is loaded dynamically within the same interface.

Application-Project:

As this is an application designed to serve restaurant customers, it must be fast and not overload every time an operation is performed. SPA will be implemented for the most part so that the application can be efficient.
